When Martin Leon remembers that he forgot to invite an important guest to a birthday party for one of his eight kids, who can blame him? Since his wife's death, he's struggled to juggle raising their large brood with his equally demanding job as head writer of After the Loving. He and Jeanie once co-wrote the daytime soap together. Now he must carry on alone in the face of a dwindling audience, an executive producer only too happy to alter his stories at her slightest whim, and a nagging case of writer's block. Unlike Martin, Roxanne Hunter doesn't love a good soap opera. She parlayed her sexy role on After the Loving into a lucrative, luxury-bedding business years ago and didn't look back. Just when she was on the brink of having it all, the universe pulled the rug out from under her, leaving her to nurse a devastating double loss of her own. Accepting Martin's last-minute invitation, Roxanne decides it's the perfect getaway to take her mind off her lonely life. All she wants is to fulfill a promise she once made to Martin's sister and find out how he and the children are coping with grief. Though Martin may wake up one day ready for a woman again, Roxanne has no intention of reliving her youthful, secret crush on him. But the females in Martin's family have other plans. Startled by the revelation that she is as much a stray as anyone else Martin has taken into his household, Roxanne nevertheless allows herself to be enfolded into the embrace of family life and a romance with him. Can she fulfill her promise to get through fate together, or will the universe – and the past – pull the rug out from under her one more time, just as she's about to get the happy ending she always wanted but never dared dream she'd have? Fans of feel-good contemporary romance will want to pick up this witty, insightful story of a flailing handsome single father and the femme fatale who brings him back to life. By debut author Karen Tomsovic.
